Inside The Numbers

Tapia and Saavedra both landed 8 power punches in the opening frame, establishing their intent to hurt one another. Saavedra's punches had more of an effect on Tapia, and in the last minute of the third round, Saavedra broke through, knocking Tapia down twice. Tapia had never been knocked down before. It looked like Saavedra was on his way to putting Tapia away, but in the last ten seconds of the fifth round that Saavedra was winning, Tapia landed an overhand right that put Saavedra down. Saavedra knocked Tapia down for a third time in the ninth round. The final stats reflect that Saavedra outworked Tapia, throwing 171 more punches. However, in five of the ten rounds, they were separated by 4 or less landed punches. In several of the middle rounds Saavedra built up leads in the opening half of the round only for Tapia to come back in the last minute of the round. One judge scored the fight 94-92 for Tapia, and the two other judges scored the fight 93-93 for a majority draw.
